WET OR DRY

Much time, energy, printers ink and good paper stock is being wasted at the present time in what purports to be a survey of the liquor situation in the nation. Newspapers over the entire nation are conducting a straw vote on the success and popularity of the Volstead Act.

Organizations against modification of the Volstead Act claim that they are not voting. They claim that both Houses of Congress are overwhelmingly dry.

Wets claim that each and everybody is voting. That both the Senate and House are not as dry as they may seem. Others claim that the senators and representatives are voting dry and living wet, and so on.

And what is all of this leading to.

NOTHING!

If we want to bring up the question of changing the Volstead Act, then let's do it in the manner the Constitution provides, instead of letting leaders of opposing forces concoct figures that are not only untrue, but misleading and an insult to the reading public of the nation.

We are not taking sides on the matter. The drys may be right. The wets may be right.

The present straw vote which is alleged to be sweeping the country, is not the kind of a thing to wish off on the intelligence of the public at the present time.

To be true, it may make interesting copy for the newspapers. So did the cross word puzzles while they were in vogue.

If the first duty of a newspaper is "public service" the newspapers should not spend its time and space in trying to push the wishes of one group or fraction, be they wet or dry.

CAULIFLOWER SHIPMENTS ARE INCREASED 500 PER CENT HERE

115 Cars Are Expected to be Shipped from County During The Present Season

L. H. Rodebaugh, general freight and traffic manager for the Sacramento Short Line railroad has announced that the shipment of cauliflower from the new Contra Costa district began during this week and is now in full swing. It is estimated that the yield is five times as great this year as in the past year. Last year there was but 20 cars of cauliflower shipped from LaFayette while this year it will be about 115 cars.

A vegetable shed at Sparkle has been built to handle the new yield. Here the cauliflower is crated and packed in refrigerator cars for the eastern market.

It is predicted that a great future lies in wait for the cauliflower farmers in Contra Costa county. Wherever tried the crop has yielded heavily and the vegetable has been of the finest. The entire crop this season was contracted for in the spring and every head has been sold.

Because of the success of raising the crop it is expected that a larger acreage will be set forth for the vegetable next season.

LEAGUE WAR IS BROUGHT TO A CLIMAX AT THE GENEVA PARLEY

Germany Rejects Last Compromise Proposal Made by Chamberlain and Briand

KARL H. VON WIEGAND
(By Universal Service)

GENEVA, Mar. 12.—Germany tonight brought the war within the League to a real climax by firmly rejecting the last compromise proposal made by Chamberlain and Briand. The proposal was that the demands of Spain and Brazil for seats on the council be dropped, but that Poland be given a non-permanent seat simultaneously with Germany's admission.

At seven o'clock the German Chancellor, his usually calm face carrying so startlingly serious an expression that it revealed his mission, called on Chamberlain at the latter's hotel and informed the British Foreign Secretary that Germany must and would adhere to the position that she could not commit herself in advance, and therefore declines to be drawn into a controversy which is wholly an internal affair of the League to which Germany does no belong as yet.

Chamberlain who has looked like a broken man in the last days was profoundly affected. Immediately upon the departure of Chancellor Luther, Chamberlain, accompanied by Lord Cecil, rushed to the Hotel Berkue to see Briand.

The Germans, who have sat back playing a remarkably tactful and clever game, decided that today's proposal of Briand and Chamberlain made by them after a three hour session of the Locarno signatures held at British headquarters was a bluff. The Germans called that bluff, if such it was.

The next move is now up to Briand and Chamberlain. Although no prositive orders have yet been issued, the German delegation is preparing to leave Gneva tomorrow evening.

Briand was plainly very depressed late tonight looking like a sick man. He charged that the Germans were trying to dictate to the league policy claiming that no promise was ever made to the Germans that others would not be given seats on the league council.

"We have made the utmost concessions to Germany," declared Chamberlain who has kept shy of the press for the last few days. He finally received the English correspondents but not until they sent him a round robin request for an interview.

Stressman who spent the evening quietly drinking Munich beer declared.

"Germany did not reject any compromise but merely reiterated her position which is the only one we can take. Not being a member of the league we cannot take part in any ofits decisions nor can we commit ourselves as to what we will do if we become a member. It is simple logical, sensible and proper."

Man Second Cousin Of Monkey Says a Famous Professor

(By Universal Service)

MT. VERNON, Iowa, March 12.—Man is not descended from monkey, but he is a distant cousin of the monkey. This theory propounded at a lecture at Cornell College today by Prof. J. R. Van Pelt, head of the Geology Department of the college, has caused more comment on the campus of this old religious institution than any address given in recent years.

Prof. Van Pelt went on to say that man is a distant cousin of the monkey, but not actually decended from him.

"Furthermore he is a distant cousin of every other animal from the Amothea to the Elephant, and if man would look down the lane of lower animals and observe their contributions to the higher product, man, and then use that observation he would achieve even greater height."

Prof. Van Pelt said there was no real reason why a scientist was not a Christian.

Dog Leads Man To Grewsome Scene

BODY OF AGED MAN FOUND ON LIMB OF TREE

Body Believed to Have Been Hanging in Tree for at Least Three Weeks

BELIEVED TO BE IDENTIFIED

Is Believed to be Oscar Gross Who Worked on Water Project for Few Hours

Peculiar actions of his dog directed J. Price an employee at Mokelumne Water Project camp two miles of the Tunnel on the Tunnel highway to a most grewsome find late yesterday. About three hundred feet from the road Price found the dead body of a man suspended from the limb of a tree by a red bandana handkerchief. The body had evindently been hanging there about three weeks.

Coroner Charles F. Donnelly who took charge of the body stated that it was in such a stage of decomposition that identification is impossible. No traces that might lead to the identity of the man could be found about his clothing.

It is believed however, that the body is that of a man named Oscar Gross, who left the Humboldt lodging house in San Francisco about three weeks ago to work at the water camp.

Gross is reported to have worked at the camp for about and hour and then disappeared. This occurred about three weeks ago.

The body when found wore a grey shirt, blue overalls and a grey cap. It was removed to the morgue at Walnut Creek.

DIPLOMATIC SECRET

The Secret process by which "Russian leather" was tanned is said to have been brought to this country by an American diplomat, who started life as a tanner. The Russians never suspected a minister plenipotentiary of having graduated from a tannery. They showed him through their plant, and later got the shock of their lives. That was bad enough for a diplomat. What about a real king, who goes poking about industrial fairs and discovering to his amusement that American typewriters are being purchased by the royal stationery department? George V is said to have used the word "scandalous." The explanation that almost "all of the best typewriting machines (used in Great Britain) are of foreign make" did not satisfy him. George is going to have the matter looked into. What a commentary on the Shavian concept of kingship! A sharp falling off in the demand for American typewriters in Great Britain may occur; but we have at least to thank his majesty for telling the world that the idea that American manufactures are inferior to foreign-made articles is "the bunk."

RACE SUICIDE

Persons who are concerned about race suicide would be relieved by a study of a recent department of commerce announcement regarding the size of families of women between the ages of 35 and 44 years who became mothers in 1924.

The total number of children ever born to these mothers, including the births of 1924, was an average of 6.7 per mother and the total number living was 5.3 per mother.

This should serve to ease the mind of those who complain that American women do not want to become mothers and who pine for the days of the Rooseveltean families when twelve and fourteen sat down to the same table for three meals a day.

If it were possible to compare the present with the past, we would probably find that as many children are being reared per family in this age as in the past generation.

We hear now of the large families of our grandparents and our great grandparents, but nothing of the small families of that day. They doubtless existed then as they do now because human nature hasn't changed much.

TEXAS ON THE JOB

The Boston Transcript thinks it is lucky for the country that Florida and California are 2,000 miles apart. Even that distance might not be complete security were it not for the fact that Texas spreads between them and not only could lick both of them at the same time, but would take great pleasure in doing it.—Houston, Tex., Post Dispatch.

Some Pages from American History

AN IMPORTANT LETTER TO ENGLAND

You will remember, perhaps, that Governor Spotswood of Virginia was a very enterprising man and a very good governor.

He believed that England was paying too little attention to the lands to the west of the colonies. He feared that through plain negligence, these valuable tracts were to pass into the hands of the French.

So, early in the eighteenth century, he sat himself down and wrote a letter. It was about like a state paper and he set down in it the facts, as he saw them, concerning these lands. Spotswood's letters and papers are very valuable to students of history. Some of them have been preserved for us. This is one of them.

He relates how he has for a long time tried to keep himself informed concerning the activities of the French. He realizes that they have an unbroken line of communication from their Canadian lands to the land along the Mississippi which they called Louisiana.

The French had not been backward. They must have been rather farseeing, for they arranged a route from Montreal up the St. Lawrence to Lake Ontario, Niagara Falls and Lake Erie. From there by overland "carry" routs and rivers they had continued their route straight to the mouth of the Mississippi.

Now Spotswood feared that the French were going to get ahead of the English. The English colonies might even be entirely surrounded by the French, if care wasn't taken to develop lands and establish posts to the westward.

Moreover the French might even get a monopoly on the skin trade and that would mean money in the coffers instead of in English purses.

I don't believe that Spotswood was an alarmist. It was dreadfully distrubing to him to have the court of England sit back and twiddle its thumbs while the French pushed their settlements into a coutry that he very well

NEW DINING ROOM LINENS MEET WITH SMART APPROVAL

A Lovely Set with Not a Difficult Stitch, That Adds to the Beauty ana Value of the Linen Chest

By MONA MULLEN

FOR the needlework enthusiast there are always new and charming designs in embroidery, especially in linens for the home. It is remarkable how often the styles in luncheon sets change, one sometimes thinks. Again, one should not be unprepared for shifting fancies, because there are so many formal and informal affairs on the social calendar that call for the serving of light refreshments—which is another way of saying that the linens must be charming and varied.

The set pictured consists of a luncheon cloth 36 inches square, and buffet scarf 12 by 32 inches, and four napkins 11¾ inches square. The shape and design of all of the pieces are included in the transfer. When stamping, a three-inch margin should be allowed for a hem, and a 2-inch margin on the scarf and napkins.

No. 13042—Luncheon cloth, buffet scarf and napkins.

Using a background of white of ecru linen, the large flowers are lovely worked in two shades of pink in the lazy-daisy stitch. The small blossoms are embroidered in French knots of blue, yellow and orange, with orange centers. The leaves are in green, using the lazy-daisy stitch, with the stems and lines of the design in black running stitch.

If preferred the edges may be finished with a border of lace or a hemstitched hem. The hemstitching may be done either by hand or machine.

None of the stitches are difficult to make and they work up very quickly. As smart as colors are this season for embroidered linens, the discriminating needleworker remembers that white is always in vogue, so if there is an inclination to do this design entirely in white, it will be quite as smart and lovely.

The GOLDEN COCOON by RUTH CROSS

Copyright, 1924, by Harper & Brothers
"The Golden Cocoon" with Helene Chadwick is a picturization of this novel by Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc

SYNOPSIS

Molly Cochran, formerly the wife of a Governor, determines to go back to Texas to visit, in disguise, the scenes of her former happiness. For years she has been a play writer in New York. She has been disappointed in the refusal of her husband to listen when she sought to warn him of a possible danger to him. Myron Eldredge, dramatic critic, meanwhile, has been a friend to both, and has tried to bring about a reconciliation.

She was outrageously slim, her eyes not less blue than the flowers that bordered her way. That violent, headstrong Molly, and yet he had swayed her to his every passing whim. . . .

That reckless, stubborn Molly—she could see her halting in the path there with a defiant challenge—to demand an accounting for the years. Rash and insolent youth, conceiving in hot lust what maturity must forge out with groping imperfection in sweat and toil and blood. Youth mortgaging the future for the vision of the moment—nay, for a mere gesture, an outlet, an expression of itself. Youth, the transcendent, the terrible, the unreturning. . . .

CHAPTER XXXII

In her room at the hotel—the hotel where the alumni dance had taken place, where another would be taking place soon, no doubt—

"I wish you wouldn't cry like that," he said after awhile.

the heat was stifling, oppressive. She changed her traveling suit for the lightest gown in her bag, and wandered out to one of the small, iron-railed balconies across the way; the same balcony, perhaps, where she and Arthur Bancroft had stood that night five years ago. Five years. . . .

This was a night of mockingbirds and magnolia blossoms—the moon a milky blossom, too, against a pall of velvet. From a tree, glistening green and blossom starred, a feathered cantatrice poured out his soul of souls into the night. Ravishingly, intolerably sweet—moonlight, blossoms, that song. . . .

She ought not to have come. She was in very truth a ghost, growing more ghostlike with every moment. She was an alien on hallowed, too familiar ground; separate and apart from all this trilling, bursting ecstasy. That bird, this odor of a thousand blossoms, this soft Southern air—they brought things back too overpoweringly.

In the city one might delude oneself with work, friendship, quiet affection—a thousand inconsequent trifles. But here on her own ground, where her roots struck deep, there was no self-deluding. She wanted life, love; she wanted Greg. She wanted nothing else in the world. Nothing else would answer. He belonged to her—she to him. No stupid quibblings of pride, honor, expediency, could change that. That other woman—what was she to him? When two people had belonged wholly to each other, body, mind, soul, something had been created out of that complete possession; something eternal and indestructible. That was marriage—the marriage of true minds. There was no other marriage.

If only for a moment that bird would be still! She put her hands over her ears, but the wild and piercing madness would not be shut out. It was like a cry, like a human cry, insistent and fierce. It was like the cry of her soul to Greg, so fierce, so anguished, it seemed he must hear and understand. What were a few leagues more or less of land and water between two immortal souls?

She turned with a sharp, convulsive movement. That cry, this odor of a thousand, ten thousand blossoms—she could endure them no longer. She would go back. She would not wait even for the morning. She ought not to have come. . . .

At the entrance to the balcony stood a bell boy in uniform—blinking at her through the half darkness.

"Gentleman to see you, miss," he mumbled and then took himself off.

There appeared presently in the archway a substantial, square-built figure. On his light summer coat the moonlight showed a mourning band.

Molly stood frozen, incredulous. It was a trick of her overwrought senses. Greg was on his way to France. . . . She had asked a miracle, yet dared not trust its fulfillment. It was Greg, but changed—how changed—broken and older—Greg, whose face was never given to show what he felt. He stood there with his head bent a little, yet looking at her—waiting as if for her to give him permission to cross the threshold. She tried to speak, to call his name, but the syllable died on her lips. There were less than half a dozen steps between them, and yet moment after moment passed—other moments—and still they only went on looking at each other, as if that were the sole means of communication left between them. It was dreadful to see Greg like that—broken and older, his head bent.

"Greg, you did hear—you came . . ." She found words at last, took a step toward him.

He put out his hands as if to ward her off. "You must hear first what I have to say." He indicated a rustic bench, but Molly moved back toward the iron railing, stood with her hands gripping it behind her.

"I see . . ." She was surprised herself to note how casual and matter-of-fact she sounded. "You've come to tell me that you do want your freedom, after all. But"—she glanced round still a little dazedly—"how did you know I was here?"

"Myron Eldredge—I wired him."

"Oh!"

He came then and stood directly in front of her. But speech seemed more difficult for him than for her. When other moments had passed in silence, she added: "You did think of a way, then? I knew you would—you're so clever about such things. . . ."

He made on odd, half-finished gesture of negation. "Don't talk like that. I came to throw myself on your mercy—to beg you to forgive me. . . ."

"Forgive you—I . . . ?" Molly made a faint, incredulous motion toward herself.

"Yes. That day when you came—I didn't understand. I was vicious, brutal—mad with jealousy. . . ."

"You jealous . . . ?" She made another incredulous movement. "Oh, no, I—that woman. . . ."

"You needn't have been. You know there's never been anybody but you—there never could be. That was the one thing that hardened my heart against you—you knew there couldn't be. Now I—can't even ask you to forgive me. . . ."

"Oh no; it is you who must forgive. . . . But how . . . ?"

He touched the band of crepe on his sleeve. "My mother—she went all at once like a tree with the ax laid to the root. She told me. I think she wanted to tell me sooner, but she didn't know how. . . ."

"Your mother—she told you . . . ?" Molly was silent with the wonder of that. Then, "Greg, you mustn't think I'm not guilty—just as guilty as you believed me—only I didn't know it. It was my own stubborn, headstrong will. Tonight for the first time I've seen it all clearly."

"Never mind about that. After all, it wasn't your going—or the reason given—that hurt most. It was your not letting me help you. I knew what it was like for a woman of your sort alone in a great city. I used to sit and picture it to myself—the hardships, privations, hunger perhaps. . . . It was torture. For years I tried to find you. Then that day when you came into my office, I thought you had what you wanted—all you wanted. . . . I thought maybe you—pitied me a little. . . ."

Molly caught his big, square hands in hers, covered them with penitent, hot kisses, with hot, self-reviling tears. "You're so much bigger than I am, Greg,—always so much finer and more generous. I'm ashamed to tell you—I didn't realize even that that was one of the ways I was hurting you. I was thinking only of my own pride, my own miserable self-respect. . . ."

He did not say anything at all. He pulled her head down against his breast, smoothed and stroked her hair, made awkward little patting motions about her shoulders. "I wish you wouldn't cry like that," he said after a while.

$40,075 Check Paid by S. O. to Distribute Stock

SAN FRANCISCO, Mar. 12.—According to a statement made by Deputy Corporation Commissioner Clifford J. McMillan yesterday, a wave of prosperity in financial circles is sweeping the business district of San Francisco. McMillan exhibited a check for $40,075 which the commission has just received from the Standard Oil company of California as a fee for a permit to distribute four hundred million dollars in assets to stockholders. He declared that the receipts of the commission for isssuing permits has been greater in the past few months than in any time in the past.

The check from the S. O. company is the largest check that the commission has ever received and it was the outcome of the recent Standard Oil-Pacific Oil company merger in which the later company took over $400,000,000 in assets. The second largest check was received from the Williamette paper company in January for a sum of $5,020.

McMillan declared that the average weekly return in fees is $2,000 as compared with the weekly fees of $1,000 last year.

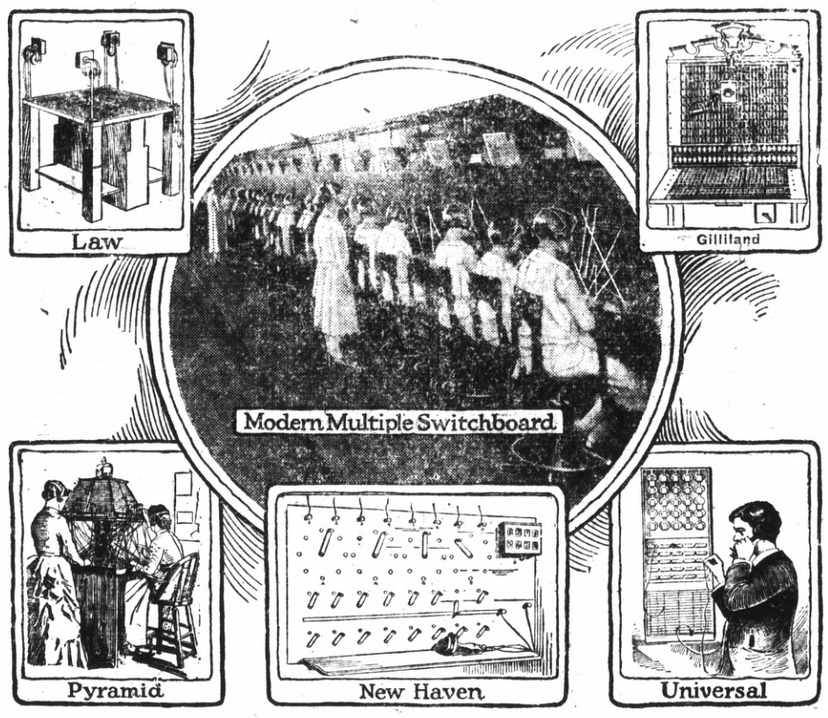
THE MODERN MULTIPLE SWITCHBOARD
AN EVOLUTION FROM HISTORIC TYPES



It has been said, truly enough, that the development of modern telephone service began with the building of the first switchboard. For some months after Alexander Graham Bell had filed his patent and successfully transmitted the first sentence of speech, the telephone business was not, strictly speaking, a service at all. Telephones were leased in pairs to a subscriber who wished to talk between his home and his place of business, or with some other particular subscriber, the connection being made by a permanently established connection between the two instruments.

This arrangement afforded communication between two telephones, but it did not make possible the inter-communication which is the very essence of modern telephone service. This came with the first apparatus for switching the circuits from one line to another—a crude, experimental switchboard made by E. T. Holmes, who operated a burglar alarm system in Boston. This provided means of inter-connection between four Boston banks. It is interesting to note in passing that the president of one large financial institution in the Hub ordered a telephone, which Holmes had installed without his knowledge, removed, declaring it to be a "plaything" which had no place in the world of business.

The first switchboard placed in service on a commercial basis was opened for service at New Haven, Conn., in January, 1878. It provided apparatus for connecting eight lines.

Other early switchboards were the Law Board and the Pyramid Board, illustrations of which are shown above. These were but two of many designs which, though put into actual commercial service, were hardly more than experiments—steps in a somewhat groping search for more efficient switching apparatus.

The evolution of the modern manually operated universal switchboard really began with the crude apparatus shown at the right of the above group of early switchboards. It is a far cry from this board of 1870 to the type with which visitors to the central office of today are familiar.

The switchboards used in large city exchanges often accommodate as many as 10,000 lines and are most complex in their mechanism. The manufacture and installation of these large boards involves a multitude of delicate operations requiring painstaking attention to details and the most craftsman-like skill. A single switchboard of this type, for example, may have more than 2,000,000 separate connections, each of which must be soldered by hand.

In operation, the modern switchboard resembles a gigantic loom. As one looks down the board, with scores of pairs of hands moving steadily but unhurriedly, one thinks of the telephone cords and plugs as skeins and shuttles and of the operators as weavers who daily fashion the warp and woof of a nation's wire-borne speech!

Men Who Wear Hair Coats Mourn for the Vanishing Camel

By EDWARD M. RUTTENBER
(Universal Service Fashion Expert)

NEW YORK, Mar. 12.—The vanishing camel is beginning to occasion some concern in the United State at the present moment, owing to the popularity of camel's hair coats for men. When the last caravan has been swallowed up in a Sahara sunset the last camel's hair coat will be worth its weight in lost treasure of the desert.

The fact that the camel is not especially prolific is a matter of more than passing concern to both producers and consumers.

The term "camel's hair" has been associated in the public mind for a long time back with a color rather than a fabric. Camel's hair shade has been reproduced in a variety of articles for out-door wear, especially overcoats. Genuine camel's hair garments are procurable in a variety of colors. The natural shade, a tan, is the one with which most people are familiar.

At the present moment genuine camel's hair overcoats are considered very smart for men. It is said for them that they serve the purpose of both a top-coat and an overcoat. The nap is very fine and the garment itself light in weight but very warm. Blue and odd shades of brown are very popular. Models are sometimes on the order of the Raglan and nearly always favor loose lines. Belts of any sort on overcoats are considered practically obsolete.

The natural shade of camel's hair has been abandoned by well-dressed men for the reason that well-executed synthetic productions have made it difficult to discriminate between the genuine and the counterfeit.

Two Years' Search For Child Ended

(By Universal Service)

SEATTLE, Wash., March 12.—Ending a two year's search extending throughout the continent for his two and one half year old daughter, Ignatius H. McCarty head of a radio supply house in San Francisco, located the child Thursday night in the home of George R. Dunn, dairy rancher at Wapato, Wash., and had her brought to Seattle Friday in custody of Yakima county deputy sheriffs.

McCarty, according to his story was divorced in California two years ago from Mrs. Dorothy McCarty, now a cabaret dancer in Chicago.

The court order, he says, gave him custody of their daughter, Jeanne, but despite this ruling, his wife's mother, Mrs. Dora B. Simon, spirited the child away, visiting relatives here and there and keeping just one jump ahead of the pursuing father.

Friday morning Sheriff Starvich, after buying a quantity of Mother Goose books and toys, had little Jeanne taken to the Juvenile detention home on Broadway for safe keeping, until the habeas corpus hearing next week, by which time it is expected the mother will have arrived here from Chicago.

Sewing or Correct English Now Worries Clubwomen and Leaders Of Education In the Eastbay

(By Universal Service)

OAKLAND, Cal., March 12.—Should the modern girl be taught to make an artistic hat or gown or should she be taught to speak correct english?

That is the question that has stirred up a pretty row among clubwomen and educational leaders in Oakland and on the University of California campus.

In other words:

When Tillie the Toiler becomes tired of being known as a dumb Dora and yearns for higher education, should she enroll in dress making classes or should she pursue classic culture.

The row was precipitated here when Mrs. Emily Noble of the department of Social Economics, University of California, declared the working girl needs a knowledge of correct English and foreign languages more than she needs to know how to sew.

"Girls, unless they are expert in sewing, can find more satisfactory clothes ready made," the university woman said.

Mrs. Frederick Gay, head of the home economics department of the Alameda district federation of women's clubs, took sharp issue.

"The average working girl," Mrs. Gay asserted, "cannot afford to buy the expensive clothes demanded in these days of sharp competition among women in the business world. A knowledge of how to make her own dresses and hats will do her more good than a Harvard accent."

ORIGINAL PLOT IN PICTURE AT THE CALIFORNIA

Every once in a while there suddenly appears on the film horizon a picture that offers something new in the way of story and theme. Originality in photoplays — especially westerns — is rare, and for that very reason "The Enchanted Hill," the new outdoor melodrama at the California Theatre, deserves to be singled out for special and honorable mention.

Paramount's screen version of Peter B. Kyne's vivid novel, and produced by Irvin Willat with an all-star cast featuring Jack Holt, Florence Vidor, Noah Beery and Mary Brian.

The background of the story is the old west, picturesque Southwest, full of romance, adventure, golden days and rugged men. The principal characters in this modern tale are Lee Purdy, a gay and gallant ex-army aviator, who buys and settles on a ranch in New Mexico, and Gail Ormsby, who inherits the adjoining ranch from her uncle. Here is the beginning of first-class love story that takes an unexpected turn when the girl, for some mysterious reason, evinces a strong dislike for her neighbor. Further complications set in, when a band of invaders attempt to kill Purdy so as to get hold of his ranch, on which, unknown to him is a buried treasure.

From that point the action is fast and furious. The subsequent events are charged with excitement and thrills, for Purdy uses airplanes and machine guns to fight his enemies to the bitter finish. Jack Holt gives a vigorous account of himself in the leading male role; Florence Vidor makes a charming heroine; Noah Beery is, as usual, a very effective "bad man"; and Mary Brian wins new laurels in a lovable characterization.

Other features on the same program include "Papa, Be Good," Glenn Tryon's funniest comedy; "Felix Keeps On Walking," a Felix the Cat cartoon; "International News" and Larry Canelo, at the organ.

Hades Is Not In Center of Earth Says Scientist

BERKELEY, Cal., March 12.—Where, please, is Hades?

That's the question that must be asked anew by persons still clinging to the belief that the fiery furnace is in the center of the earth.

The center of the earth is a core of the same physical consistency of nickel steel, according to the theory advanced at the University of California today by Prof. Perry Byerly, Seismologist, who thereby offered a challenge to the Hades-in-the-center-of-the-earth idea.

Byerly based his conclusions on a study of earthquake records.

His theory is at odds with the belief that materials of the earth are shaded gradually.

The earth, at a depth of 2900 kilometers, he asserts, probably has the nickel steel core, which, in turn, is surrounded and overlaid with another core of less hard consistency at the depth of 57 kilometers.

At these points, he says, the continuity of the earth's structure is abruptly broken.

Byerly today said he conducted his studies from records of earthquake waves, of which there are three distinct types.

"There are longitudinal waves which go down into the earth and are refracted back and register first upon the seismograph," he said, "and there are transverse waves that follow the same procedure. These two are followed by surface waves. It is from the first two types that our studies are made and from these we are able to determine the nature of the earth's interior structure.

"Both cores of the earth cast what we call shadows or cause curves in the waves that emanate from earthquakes."

BIG "WESTERN" OF YEAR NOW AT RICHMOND

Young Lochinvar's come out of the west. And with him, he's brought the best "western" of the year. In this case Victor Fleming, well-known producer of movie thrill-dramas is our Lochinvar, and the name of his picture is "A Son of His Father."

Harold Bell Wright, the favorite author of millions of Americans, wrote the story. After seeing it on the screen the secret of hispopularity is easily seen. There is never a quiet moment or the least drag in the action. "Big Boy" Morgan, the "Son"; Nora, the girl who comes to find her brother; Charlie Gray, the sick friend; Holdbrook, the villain; Zobester, the head of the smugglers, and all the rest are just such people as one is apt to meet every day.

It is the tale of cattle rustlers and their never ending quarrel with the ranchers. Morgan is a young rancher who has sworn to clear Arizona of those men who over-run it. Then— little Nora, a young Irish girl arrives on the scene.

Morgan asks her to stay at his house till her brother returns. He tells her that he has gone to the hills after some cattle. In reality he has joined the smugglers. A tale of intense drama ensues.

The beauty of the surroundings and the fast action of this tale will rouse you as nothing else ever has. It is entertainment with a capital "E".

A fine cast is headed by Warner Baxter, Bessie Love and Raymond Hatton. Other players include Walter McGrail, Carl Stockdale, Billy Eugene, James Farley, Charles Stevens, Valentina Zemina and George Kuwa.

Victor Fleming the producer of "Empty Hands," "Adventure" and "The Devil's Cargo" directed "A Son of His Father." Anthony Coldeway, scenarized Wright's novel. It's a Paramount picture at the Richmond Theatre for the last times tonight.

Other features include "Goat Getters," a juvenile comedy; Felix the Cat cartoon.

Postal Employees Celebrate the 139 Birthday of Service

(By Universal Service)

OAKLAND, March 12.—The first mail carrier dodged Indians to save his scalp; mail carriers today dodge automobiles to save their skin.

That was the comment here today by Postmaster John F. Conners, who with his staff celebrated the 139th anniversary of the founding of the United States Post Office Department.

George Washington appointed the first postmaster, Samuel Osgood of Massachusetts, according to records in the postoffice here.

The post office department has grown from a small bureau operated on $25,000 a year to the largest single employer of labor in the world. It now handles more than one-third of the mail of the civilized world.

The first carrier was appointed under a decree which vividly illuminates the turn of events in a century and a half. Part of it reads:

"He shall go monthly between New York and Boston.

"Necessary arrangements were made with a person concieved the most proper, beng voted active, stout and indefatigable.

"I have fixed an annual salary on him, which, together with the advantages of his letters and other small packages may afford him a handsome livelyhood."

Osgood, that pioneer of the mail service, was brave. He had to blaze his way through trackless forests, dodging Indians and pitfalls of an unexplored land.

He made one trip and nearly lost his scalp. No one else after that would tackle the job for many years.

Husband Pays Bail Of Wife Accused Of Poisoning Him

(By Universal Service)

LOS ANGELES, March 12.—Mrs. Olive Bowers, Sawtelle clubwoman charged jointly with Elmer M. Archer of conspiring to poison W. R. Bower, her wealthy husband, was released on $5,000 bail following arraignment before Judge Blake today.

Bowers, who is an attorney and banker of Sawtelle, acted as his wife's attorney, during the court proceedings and furnished money for her bond.

Archer was unable to furnish bail and was returned to the city jail to await a preliminary hearing of the case, set for March 19.

Mrs. Bowers, it developed today, is a cousin of Barbara La Marr, the late screen star. W. W. Watson, father of the dead actress was an interested spectator in the courtroom during the arraignment of Archer and Mrs. Bowers.

Breaking under the nerve strain she has been under for the past two days, Mrs. Bowers collapsed twice today, once on the way from the jail to the courtroom, and again just as the proceedings were concluded.

Bowers appearance as his wife's attorney came at a dramatic moment. Rising to his feet at the arraignment he informed Judge Blake that he would act for his wife.

"I am representing Mrs. Bowers," the aged man stated.

"Are you representing Archer, too, in this action?" Judge Blake inquired.

"I should say not," Bowers shouted. "I am representing my wife only and I believe that the court should be lenient and reduce the amount of bail in this case."

The court refused to reduce the amount of bail, however, and shortly after the arraignment Bowers posted $5,000 cash on which Mrs. Bowers was released.

"I'm through with her—our domestic relations are at an end. But I must take care of her as a matter of honor," declared Bowers.

Former Society Leader "Prisoner In Her Home"

(By Universal Service)

NEWPORT, R. I., March 12.—The great tragedy in the life of Mrs. Hermann Oelrichs, sister of Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt and once society's undisputed leader but of late the carefully guarded occupant of a room of her marble mansion, "Rosecliff" here, was intensified tonight when her physical illness took a severe turn for the worse.

Just at a time when Mrs. Oelrichs was being strengthened mentally and physically, for a trans-atlantic voyage and subsequent treatment by the most skilled physicians and surgeons in Europe, came what the colony fears is a serious physical relapse.

Dr. Gilbert Parker, specialist familiar with the wealthy Bowager's case, will be here the first thing in the morning from New York and will collaborate with Dr. Michael H. Sullivan in an effort to pull Mrs. Oelrichs around to a condition that will allow her to be taken to Europe for the proposed treatment in the spring.

For months the social colony has grieved at the condition of the once witty and scintillating "Tesse" Oelrichs. Her failure to appear last July 25 at the wedding of her niece, Miss Muriel Vanderbilt to Frederick Cameron church, of Boston, caused to be disclosed the pathetic condition of the New York shipping magnate's widow.

Since then she has been virtually a prisoner in her own marble mansion, where she is confined to a single room. From this room, its walls heavily padded, its floors deadened to sound with heavy rugs she has been able to gaze upon the sea.

Longingly, she has looked out day after day, on the ocean and has expressed the desire to sail somewhere away from her present surroundings.

Early last summer Mrs. Oelrichs was taken to Newport from New York by special train. A fortnight ago when she was taken back to New York by special train. The excitement of the trip and the noise and bustle of the big city were too much for her and she was hurried here and again confined to her "Mansion Cell".

Since then Mrs. Oelrichs has been attended unceasingly by four nurses, who never vacate their watch, and a coterie of servants. If she can be restored sufficiently to health she will be taken abroad for the planned treatment and change of scene, believed to be the only recourse in the desperate effort of saving her life.

High Food Value in Beets

BEETS are rated among the most highly nutritious of vegetables. The sugar percentage of the ordinary table beet is often as high as ten per cent. Therefore, this vegetable is a generous contributor of carbohydrates, which enter the tissues as glucose. From the oxidation of glucose in our tissues we derive more than half of our energy.

So the beet is considered one of the most important food-roots. Its vitamin content is considerable, although less than that of spinach, sauerkraut, turnips or carrots. Many palatable dishes may be quickly made from beets, as they may be purchased in ready-to-serve form and may be included in the diet in winter as well as summer. Canned beets are convenient, for they have already been thoroughly cooked. They may be quickly diced for salad, creamed in white sauce, or served with drawn butter. Many people like the addition of hot vinegar.

Beets stuffed with peas are made from canned whole beets. The larger variety should be selected, and the insides scooped out with a small spoon. Drain the liquor from a can of peas and heat them in a double boiler. Drain again, add a spoonful of melted butter, salt and pepper to taste, and fill the hollowed beets with them. The portion of the beets previously removed may be cut into small pieces and mixed with the peas, if desired. The filled beets should be set in the oven for a few minutes. Pour melted butter over all and serve.

ALUMNI BEATEN IN FIGHT WITH HIGH CAGERS

The high school basketball squad went home happy last night. They had meet the Alumni cagers and they were theirs by a score of 17-6. It was what is termed a "peach" of a game from the start to the finish.

Half of the Alumni's hard work was in guarding Rowdy Dyer from making shots, but Dyer managed to get his ten points. Paul Villalovos and Ernie Barbieri were the other two that did the scoring.

In the 130 pound game the high school team lost to the fighting alumni quintet by a score of 16-13, and the high girls team won their game by a score of 20-14.

The following is the line up for the unlimited games:

High school—Dyer and Villalovos forwards; O. Johnson, center; Barbieri and Milicevich, guards. Subs. Gray, Gualdoni, Clark, H. Johnson, Thompson and Santella.

Alumni—Morrison and O'Brien, forwards; Lemkuhl, center, Chatelton and Passch, guards. Subs: Lee, Healy, Pitchford, Hecker, Healey and Campbell.

Dempsey Match Given Big Laugh

(By Universal Service)

NEW YORK, March 12.—The Los Angeles story that Jack Dempsey had signed to box Wills for Flloyd Fitzsimmons either in Chicago or Michigan City was given the laugh along Broadway. Few believe that Dempsey intends to meet the Harlem challenger or that either Michigan City or Chicago really wants the mixed match.

The Los Angeles story says that Wills and Manager Paddy Mullins already received $100,000 for their end and are to get ten per cent of what Fitzsimmons will be a three million dollar gate. Mullins himself spiked that part of the story today.

"We have not received 100,000 dollars or anything like that," said Paddy. We are not even bound to fight Dempsey for Fitzsimmons. We did sign such a match with Fitzimmions but he has violated his part of the agreement and we are not tied down.

Florida Sheriff Ends Post-Mortem On Stribling Tunney Match Failure

By DAMON RUNYON
(Copyright 1926, Universal Service)

MIAMI, Fla. Mar. 12.—While all the parties interested in the late Tunney-Stribling match were holding a sort of post-mortem consultation at the City hall today to see if they couldn't devise ways and means of breathing life back into the departed, the sheriff poked his head through the door. There is nearly always a sheriff lurking in the background of human events. This sheriff was Mr. Henry Chase, of the County of Dade. He lifted a hand of high authority just as Mr. Jesse Baugh, the rotund promoter of the match was about to offer a suggestion of more or less importance.

"Boys," said sheriff Chase, "it's no use. Not a bit. I've just had word from Governor Martin to prevent any prize fight from being held within the limits of this county. I am the sheriff, and must do my duty."

The inquest adjourned sine die. It was the concensus of opinion that the match was deader than a door nail, which is said to be very dead indeed. Mr. Jesse Baugh, the promoter, retired to his headquarters at the Miami Hotel somewhat exhausted from a long struggle against the inevitable. Mr. William Gibson, manager of Gene Tunney, Mr. "Pa" Stribling, manager of his favorite son and heir, and Judge D. J. Heffermnan, representing the committee of local business men that had some idea of trying to assist in resuscitating the match were present at the post mortem.

Mr. Gibson had his attorney, Mr. Pine, with him. Early in the meeting, Mr. Gibson reached into the left hand pocket of a pair of immaculately white trouserloons and after much tugging brought out a large wad of currency. He eyed this wad long and regretfully, then handed it over to Mr. Pine. In turn Mr. Pine passed it on to Mr. "Tiny" Parker, a former national league umprire who seems to be the Mike Jacobs of Miami. Mr. Tiny Parker took over the sale of tickets for the Tunney-Stribling matter, and had disposed of some $21,000 worth of tickets when the match passed out. The currency handed over by Mr. Gibson represented the $5800 which Mr. Gibson had received from the promoters on Mr. Tunney's account. Mr. "Tiny" Parker will devote this $5800 along with the $6500 advanced to young Stribling, and what he can get out of the arena, to taking care of the ticket holders. It seems that Mr. Parker advanced the ticket money as it came in to Mr. Jesse Baugh, the promoter, who devoted it to building he arena. As I understand the situation there will be no court actions, or prosecutions, or other unpleasant incidents of that nature, because there will eventually be no ground for same. The post-mortem discussed a number of projects looking to the carrying on the contest tomorrow night, and among other things it was proposed to pay Mr. Gibson $10,000 on account immediately, with whatever came in at the gate. Mr. Gibson was referring back to his original contract calling for $50,000 when the voice of the sheriff was heard in the land. I judge that Governor Martin had just heard of the plan to hold the Tunney-Stribling bout in Miami.

The Governor has been ill in the executive home in Tallahassee and when a man is sick he doesn't hear much news from the outside world. True, something has been made of the bout in the public prints, but perhaps the papers were withheld from the Governor. The prohibition to the sheriff was against a prize fight, as I understand it. The Tunney-Stribling matter wasn't supposed to be a prize fight. It was to be a boxing contest. Any follower of the manly art of scrambling cars will tell you that there is a great difference, especially if it is desired to detour a law.

It is inconceivable that the Governor heard of the bout heretofore he would have permitted a promoter to go ahead and build a big arena at considerable cost and sell tickets up and down the land. A governor cannot be expected to keep track of every little thing that goes on in a state as big as Florida, therefore I repeat my assumption that Governor Martin heard of the matter only through the hullabalioo of the past few days. And yet I think his action is in a way a reflection upon Mr. Johnny Cox, the nimble publicity director of the match. Mr. Cox had gone to infinite trouble and pains to tell the world about the affair. He will be disappointed. And not a little hurt when he learns that there is even one man in the country who hadn't heard of it, especially a man of the importance of a governor.

Mr. Cox couldn't resist his instinct toward publicity even after the voice of the sheriff had called halt. He informed me that "Pa" Stribling and son would positively appear at the arena in Hialeah tonight, and that young Stribling would enter the ring striped for action, and do a little shadow boxing. I suggested that it would be more interesting if young Stribling went a couple of fast rounds with his parent. But Mr. Cox said that "Pa" has hurt his right hand smacking a contentious motorist the day before, and would be unable to go on. Still, Mr. Cox said, he didn't think young Stribling would be any better than a 6 to 5 favorite over the old man, at that.

I do not know the intent of young Stribling's proposed appearance in the arena unless "Pa" has some idea that it will complete the record as far a she is concerned, and show thathe was willing to go through with the battle, in fact, "Pa" has been saying that his son was prepared to fight Tunney under any conditions, but I imagine that "Pa" is merely taking advantage of the situation.

High School Golfers To Play Directors

Today will see the Richmond high school golf team battle the Carquinez directors team at the club course. Both teams are out for a win, especially the high school team, who declare that they are going to show the older men the way the game should be played. By the looks of some of the scores the high school boys turn in there is a big chance that they will show the clubmen something.

VETERAN JIMMY RING AND ROOKIE AL MOORE, BOTH BROOKLYNITES, TRAINING WITH GIANTS IN FLORIDA

When the Giants cross the East River to play in Brooklyn this season, two Brooklyn ball-tossers may face their home folk. One is Jimmy Ring, formerly a pitcher with the Phillies, the other Al Mocre, a promising rookie. Ring and Moore are shown practicing at the New York spring training camp at Sarasota, Fla.

STRIBLING-TUNNEY

Now that the Stribling-Tunney match has fallen through and young Stribling has announced that he is willing to fight for the "fun of the game"—stop that laughing—Tex Rickard has announced that if the public is interested enough he will stage the battle in May—maybe. In the meantime Stribling is sitting pretty with a few thousands that he collected in advance of the proposed bout at Miami.

CARDINAL TRACK

The sport world on this coast was surprised last week because the Bruin track team a'most doubled the score on the Olympic club. Stanford now announces that unless her men have the spring fever she will double the score. The Cards have a mighty fine track team this year and are laying in ambush for the Clubmen.

U. C.-ST. MARY'S

Today will see the California track team and baseball team go up against the strong St. Mary teams at Berkeley. The baseball game will take all interest for the Saints have collected together an aggregation of hitters and will give the Bruins a run for their money. This will be the first of a series of three games between the two schools.

HOFF BREAKS RECORD

Charley Hoff comes through with another record breaker, according to news from Georgetown University, where Hoff is making his comping grounds. After breaking the pole vault record a few times, Hoff now unofficially breaks the broadjump record at 23 feet 8 inches leap.

LET'S GROWL

Even though the U. C. students may protest because of the use of the name of the Mission "bears" for the second San Francisco ball club, President William McCarthy of the Bears has announced that so much publicity has been given the team under the name of the Bears that he feels it will hurt the team to change the name.

Pie Traynor Will Not Be Seen In Games On Coast

(By Universal Service)

PASO ROBLES, March 12.—Manager McKechnie of the Pirates today struck "Pie" Traynor's name off the list of those scheduled to leave for San Francisco next Tuesday.

The injured third baseman is limping about in civilian clothes but when he heard he was not expected to play against the Seals and Mission Bears he voiced much disappointment. Traynor will try to make the bosses rescind the order as he says his injuries always heal quickly and he does not think he would be taking any risk by playing against the Coast League clubs.

"Pie" is always bubbling over with enthusiasm. Although he has been with the Pirates since 1922 and has risen to a point where he is regarded as the best third baseman in the sport, the New England boy likes to play ball so well he feels slighted if he is left out of the spring exhibtion games.

Traynor's kid brother, Arthur, also has a bad foot, which has interferred with his progress in camp.

"Babe" Adams leg injury is still serious enough to keep him under the care of the trainer.

Eddie Montague, Frisco school boy infielder, joined the Pirates today. Montague and Joe Cronin are two nineteen year old phenoms of the Golden Gate City, who have made marked impressions on the baseball sharps here.

Hollingbery Gets Offer to Coach Washington Team

SAN FRANCISCO, March 12.—Orin ("Babe") Hollingberry, for three years coach of the Olympic club football team here, late today received an offer to become head football coach of Washington State College. "I am seriously considering the offer," Hollingberry said, "but will withhold my decision for the time being." The northern post became vacant when A. A. Exendine, for several years grid mentor of Washington State, resigned at the close of the 1925 season. Hollingbery acquired considerable fame last year when his powerful Olympic eleven went through the season undefeated, including among his victims the five years' undefeated Golden Bears of the University of California.

MISSION HIGH WINS FROM LOCAL NINE

Although the Richmond high school baseball team had all the chances in the world of winning a good game yesterday from the Mission high school, they threw them away by a system of "long range throws" as Coach Ivan W. Hill declared. The final score was 5-3, for the Mission high school.

Gomez, the local hurler, pitched a pretty brand of ball. He sent fourteen men to the bench by the strike out route and allowed the Missionites but 5 hits. But in spite of this by a number of boots the local team threw the game away.

West did the hurling for the Mission team and allowed eight hits.

The most exciting part of the game was in the seventh inning, when the local team scored two runs, tying the score 3-3.

But their rally died and the Mission team went home the victor.

Fined for Fishing Without a License

Justice of the Peace John Roth fined A. Cassiglia of Oakland $29 when he appeared before him yesterday morning on a charge of fishing without a license.

J. A. Bundock, state fish and game warden charged that he had arrested Cassigila on Thursday night near Giant with 18 striped bass in his possession. He declared that the fish totaled in weight 30 pounds. The law provides that fish must not be caught with a hook under 12 inches in length and not with a net under 12 inches. The more serious charges were reduced.

HEEDED MOTHER'S ADVICE

Oakland, Cal., Feb. 26, 1926.
For more than a year I suffered from hemorrhage from a tumor. During this time I was treated by several physicians, all of whom agreed that an operation was the only thing that could help me. Neither my husband nor I liked the idea of the knife.
Upon the advice of my mother who, after having an operation on the right side, the wound forming a fistula which had never healed for 14 years, had found complete relief and fistula healed by drinking the Fong Wan Herbs, I decided to try them.
Owing to my terrible condition and my extremely poor health, it took about six months before I was entirely well. I am now in splendid health and my old trouble nave been completely vanquished.
I formerly lived at 1805 Howard street, San Francisco, but have recently removed to Oakland. My phone number is Market 6550.

EXPERT TALKS TO BOYS OF THE JUNIOR HIGH

Fifty boys of the Roosevelt Junior high school's shop mathematics and drawing classes were treated to a practical demonstration of mathematics by G. E. Nickerson superintendant of construction on the S. A. Muller building at Tenth and Macdonald.

Nickerson brought along a surveying outfit with which he demonstrated examples in the squaring of foundations and the finding of levels. He stressed the point of being accurate in all calculations with special care being taken to get foundations in right. Instances of great waste of money in public surveys were cited by Nickerson as examples of carelessness.

In concluding his talk, at the request of Instructor H. L. Hunn, he told some of his own interesting experiences while acquiring his preliminary training.

In making this demonstration, Nickerson was rendering a considerable service as excerts from the lives of successful men mean much to a growing boy. Such talks promote an increased interest in the education of the boy of today by the "boy of yesterday."

TWO AMERICAN GIRLS TO MEET ON NICE COURT

(By Universal Service)

Special Cable Dispatch

NICE FRANCE, March 12.—Two American girls will meet tomorrow on the local exhibition court to decide the Nice singles championship.

One is Miss Isabelle Mumford of Boston who turned in the most startling upset of the week this morning when she defeated the brilliant English girl Eileen Bennett in a semi-final match 4-6, 6-3, 6-0. Helen Wills, of course is Miss Mumford's opponent in the finals.

The American champion made a practice affair out of her semi-final match with Madame Peteri of Hungary, which she won at 6-2, 6-2, this afternoon.

Miss Wills and C. H. Kingsley, later in the day entered the fourth round of the mixed doubles when they defeated Mlle. Bourgeois and partial revenge for her defeat M. Aron, 6-1, 6-3.

Miss Eileen Bennett gained partial revenge for her defeat at the hands of Miss Isabelle Mumford of Boston in the singles when she and her partner Miss Jean Ridley of England conquered Miss Mumford and Miss C. F. Aeschlimann, formerly of Boston in the women's doubles 7-5, 2-6, 6-1.

In looking forward to tomorrows match between the Americans, Miss Wills and Miss Mumford, the critics are comparing the scores of the two players in their matches against Miss Bennett. When they last met Miss Wills allowed the English girl two games in the entire match. It required three sets for Miss Mumford to win her contest today.

Advocates for Bigger Navy for Japan Get Set-Back When the Government Fails to Give Funds

(By Universal Service)

TOKYO, March 12.—Advocates of a bigger navy for Japan are deeply aroused over the failure of the government to provide funds for carrying out the navy department's construction program and are said in authoritative circles to be after the scalp of Admiral Hyo Takarabe, Minister of the Navy.

Officials of the navy board, many months ago, worked out a plan for the construction of auxiliary ships during a period of five years, involving an expenditure of approximately $160,000,000 A determined fight was made to obtain the approval of the cabinet for this scheme.

In the cabinet headed by the late Premier Kato, however, the economy motive was very strong, with Y. Hamaguchi, the finance minister, ringing the changes constantly on the necessity for cuting down public expenditures. Hamaguchi fought the navy's scheme so vigorously that it was shelved, temporarily at least, and a merely nominal appropriation for naval construction included in the 1926 budget. After the death of Count Kato and the appointment of Reijiro Wakatsuki as premier, the same policy with regard to naval appropriations was followed and the budget as finally passed did not contain the appropriations the navy demanded.

During the last session of the Diet, however, a bill for the reform of the taxation system was one of the pet measures of the Wakatsuki cabinet, with finance Minister Hamaguchi as its chief spensor. One of the chief items of this program was a reduction of the land tax by one per cent.

While the tax bill was being considered the Seiyo Honto, a minority political party, presented a demand that the government subsidy for education be increased from $20,000,000 a year to $40,000,000. Hamabuchi argued that the government couldn't affordit.

Since the Kenseikai, the governparty, had not sufficient votes in the diet to put its program through without support of the Seiyu Honto, it was forced to compromise. The government agreed not to reduce the tax on land and to increase the subsidy for education to $35,000,000. Seiyo Honto was satisfed and the tax bill was passed.

Then the navy department started to protest. If Hamaguchi could find money to satisfy Seiyo Honto's demands when it was necessary to avoid a government defeat the naval spokesman argued, he could have found some more for the navy. If the navy yielded its demands under a plea for national economy, other departments should be forced to economize also. The whole trouble, they declared, was that Admiral Takarabe had not put up a sufficiently vigorous fight to get the money the navy wanted. Therefore, Admiral Takarabe should resign.

It is unlikely that Admiral Aakarabe will resign, despite the streng pressure from within his own department. Naval officials have made it clear, however, that they have not abandoned their building program and it is certain that the fight to obtain government approval of the plan and sufficient appropriations to carry it hrough will be made with increased vigor next year.
